

PORTFOLIO PROJECT: PART 2

Activating the next generation of charity: water supporters

A new donation program for college students

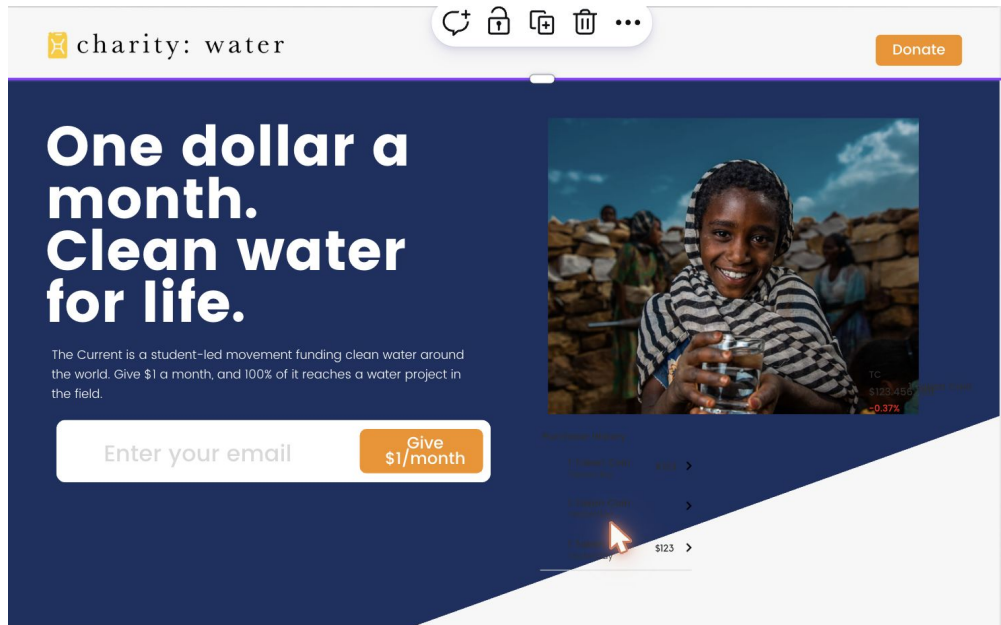

LANDING PAGE

The Spring asks for an open-ended monthly gift, which feels out of reach on a student budget. The Current reframes it as one dollar a month tied to a student-led movement, so giving feels affordable, social and built for the activism-minded college audience the campaign is trying to reach.

Influencer Marketing on Social Media

INFLUENCER CONTENT GUIDELINES

- Content must be: a short, personal TikTok about why the creator gives to clean water, ending with an invite to join The Current for $1 a month.
- Content must show: the creator on camera, real charity: water project footage, the $1-a-month ask, and the @jointhecurrent handle on screen.
- Influencer must be located in: the United States, ideally in or near a large college town with an active, activism-minded student community.
- Tone should be: hopeful, genuine and empowering, focused on the good a dollar can do rather than guilt.

OUR MISSION

Clean water for every person on the planet

- Reaches our audience: a mostly US, Gen Z college following, ideally at activism-minded campuses.
- Content fits the cause: posts about activism, sustainability, nonprofits or campus life, so clean water feels natural, not random.
- Authentic and engaged: a micro-influencer (roughly 10,000 to 100,000 followers) with high engagement and real values, so the $1-a-month ask reads as a genuine recommendation, not an ad.

INTEREST-BASED AUDIENCE

Objective: introduce The Current to college students who don't know it yet and drive first-time $1-a-month sign-ups.

KPI: new $1-a-month sign-ups from this audience, working toward the goal of 2,000 student donors.

Cost-efficiency metric: cost per sign-up (total ad spend divided by new $1-a-month donors).

RETARGETING STRATEGY

I recommend retargeting people who visited The Current landing page or engaged with our organic and paid posts but did not sign up. They have already shown interest in the program, so a simple reminder of the $1-a-month ask and the 100% model gives them a low-pressure reason to finish signing up. Because they are already warm and cost little to reach again, they are the audience most likely to convert.

LevelUp: Ambassador Program

LEVELUP | BRAND EXAMPLE

- Brand that's doing a great job marketing to students on-campus:
Example: Red Bull. They have a popular campus ambassador program where they host events and hand out free merchandise.
 - Amazon Prime Student
- What they do well:
 - Amazon meets students right where the friction is: a long free trial and student-only pricing make signing up easy, while campus touchpoints like Amazon lockers and fast dorm delivery keep it useful every day. By earning loyalty during college, Amazon turns students into full-price customers for years after graduation.

LEVELUP | charity: water engagement ideas

- Host a Walk for Water on the quad, where students carry jerry cans the distance many kids walk each day for water, then sign up for The Current right after.
- Run a pop-up refill and clean-water tasting station at club fairs and orientation, staffed by student ambassadors who explain the $1-a-month program.
- Partner with student orgs and Greek life on a $1 Challenge, where chapters compete to recruit the most monthly givers to The Current.
