

Business Beat: SCLPT Studio brings boutique wellness to Athens

By: Grace Park

Profile: Pilates has surged in popularity nationwide, but Athens had no boutique studio offering both reformer Pilates and hot mat sculpt classes. SCLPT Studio co-founders Alexis Cason and Genna Ringler opened one year ago to fill that gap. The studio hit maximum capacity and paused new memberships, signaling an untapped demand for wellness-focused fitness in Athens.

Why Now?

- Athens is growing beyond a college town. The city attracts more young professionals, families and long-term residents than ever. SCLPT filling up in one year shows Athens has an appetite for wellness businesses that serve the whole community, not just students.
- Timeliness: Boutique fitness in Athens. SCLPT landing in Athens at this moment puts the city in step with a larger cultural shift toward low-impact, wellness-focused movement.
- Athens lacks a fitness and wellness studio dedicated diverse well-being fitness. SCLPT may be the only studio in Georgia offering both reformer Pilates and hot mat sculpt classes under one roof. That is a local story with a statewide angle.

Best Quote

"Coding by day, fitness instructor by night," said Cason.

"Even on your worst days personally or business-wise, you still show up with a big smile and run a beautifully run class," Ringler said.

Best Picture or Video

Reformer machines line the studio floor at SCLPT Studio in Athens, Ga. The boutique fitness studio, co-founded by Alexis Cason and Genna Ringler, offers both reformer Pilates and hot mat sculpt classes to members. [Photo/Grace Park]

IMG 5630.MOV Members perform a reformer Pilates class at SCLPT Studio in Athens, Ga. The studio runs 13 to 17.

IMG 5608.MOV Mats line the floor of the hot mat sculpt room at SCLPT Studio in Athens, Ga. Co-founders Alexis Cason and Genna Ringler say the heated mat class offering sets the studio apart from other fitness studios in the area. [Photo/Grace Park]